Summary:

- Andrew Malone ventured into the Paris suburb of Saint-Denis for a week
- The neighbourhood is home to as many as 300,000 illegal immigrants
- Many rely on crime or the 'black economy' to get by and live in poverty
- He found rule of French law, equality, religious freedom, was lost in the suburb
- There are more mosques there than anywhere else and 35 known jihadis

Having spent several days in Saint-Denis, it's clear to me that the area is already lost to France — to the rule of French law, equality, religious freedom, and even access to the streets by the police themselves. Indeed, this is a parallel state — a state within a state, with its own rules and religious courts — where allegiance to Islam comes ahead of fealty to France.
