Summary:

A public health body has removed a suggestion that people seek advice from "faith leaders" over whether to vaccinate their children after the National Secular Society questioned it. Public Health England (PHE) has altered a public facing leaflet [9] which said people "may wish to seek advice from your faith leaders or other community leaders" over whether to vaccinate. The NSS wrote to PHE after it used similar language in response to recent reports [10] that some Muslim parents were refusing to allow children to have a flu vaccine.
