News Date:

17/07/2015

Summary:

Amid increasing fears of radicalisation of young British Muslims, questions are being asked about the role mosques and Muslim organisations in the country are playing, or failing to play, to stop this dangerous phenomenon. Estimates of British membership in the Islamic State (ISIS) range from 500-2,000, according to British Muslim Member of Parliament Khalid Mahmood in November 2014. But questions remain over how to counter this dangerous ideology that is increasingly gaining purchase among some segments of the British Muslim community, with many calling for tighter regulation of mosque

News Date:

18/02/2017

Summary:

It has been over two years since Mr Sisi, an observant Muslim, lamented that some of his co-religionists were becoming "a source of worry, fear, danger, murder and destruction to all the world". He urged Egyptian clerics to push back against the jihadists of Islamic State (IS). Egypt itself was a victim, he said: angry Islamists have attacked the government and an affiliate of IS battles the army in Sinai. To combat such extremism, "a religious revolution" was needed, said Mr Sisi—and al-Azhar, the Sunni world's oldest seat of learning, should take the lead.
